What do you think is the best part of Scotus?

BITS AND PIECES OF US

With Scotus having opportunities in faith and academics, fine arts and activities, and sports, students have many different options to grow.
Students grow through their faith and expand their knowledge in academics.
"The students around you work hard to succeed too, and you push each other. The teachers want all their students to succeed and push everyone to do their best. I think that being around people who care about their academics as you care about yours helps you to do your best and be successful," sophomore Amber Buhman said.

Students are required to take a religion class, but there are many other areas to help them grow in their faith.
"I think what has shaped me the most is learning to understand. I don't have any religion belief. Sometimes it is hard for me to understand Christianity and the ideas behind it, and the culture differences made things harder.

Although, there are still concepts that I don't agree with, I try to understand and learn the reason people believe ## it," senior Flora He said.

Fine arts and activities are events that start off as small groups but then grow into one big family. "The musical really helped me get to know many new people and make lots of new friends. The musical also helped me grow in confidence and get out of my comfort zone by trying something new. I really enjoyed how we became one big family," freshman Emily Ferguson said.

Scotus has always had high expectations when it comes to athletics, but no championship would be won without relationships.
"The people in Scotus athletics have shaped me by giving me the opportunity to be the best. They push me in my events and allow improvement every day. These daily encouragements help me at practice, as well as in the classroom, and will continue to help me into my future," junior Lucas Schaecher said.

Excelling in academics and keeping the faith go hand in hand and are two essential pieces of Scotus.
Scotus is known for its academic excellence and test scores. Because the students are challenged with a tough curriculum and held to high expectations, their academic levels often shine above other schools. A student may not be the smartest person in their class, but with some effort and guidance from staff members, they can reach their academic potential. Being successful throughout academics is not the only priority. Engaging in the faith is even more important.

Students at Scotus Central Catholic have the privilege to begin each class period with a prayer. With the help and guidance of Jesus, teachers and students work together to complete each task at hand. Having a faith-based education allows the students to learn about Him, who died on the cross for the sins of the world. They are able to grow in their faith during religion class while still learning the basics in other required classes.

The school provides its students with a chance to deepen their faith and advance in their academics each day. They can then take their faith and academics to succeed outside the walls of Scotus.

Making the memories matter

Scotus retreats are a time for students to both grow together as a class and also grow closer to God. It is a time for students to forget their studies for a day and focus on making the memories that truly matter in high school.
"The major focus of retreats are for class bonding. It's being able to hang out with the people that you usually wouldn't spend time with," Salerno said.

Seniors Allison Starzec and Kendra Wiese go for a paddle boat ride during the senior retreat. The senior retreat is held at Timberlake each year.

During retreats, many different games are played including the John Duns quarter game, the marshmallow toss, and the mail call game. These work as great ice-breakers for classes to become more comfortable around each other.

Pat Brockhaus is the modern government teacher at Scotus. He attends the senior retreat every year.
"I really believe my own faith grows a little more by just watching the seniors, supporting them, and getting to know them outside of the classroom," Brockhaus said.

One of the major goals of retreats are for classes to grow on their faith journey together. It is a time for them to learn about each other and provide support to one another.

Julie Blaser has been the Algebra I teacher at Scotus for 27 years. She attended her first senior retreat this year.
"This class is special to me because they have chosen to take me along with them for every retreat since their freshmen year. It's been great to see their growth in maturity and unity throughout the years. As freshmen, they were really cliquey, whereas this year everybody spent time together as a group," Blaser said.

What was the most memorable part of the retreat?

The day of the March, Friday January 19th, was spent in front of the Washington Monument and in the streets of Washington. ## Fhghting for the forgotten

Speaking for what you believe in means speaking for what is right. When someone strongly believes in something, they fight for it and speak up for it.
The March for Life allows people from all across the country to speak out for what they believe in. This event took place in Washington, DC. This event is the fight to end Roe vs. Wade, which is the law that was passed on January 22nd of 1973, which allows abortions in the United States.
"Life is such a beautiful and precious gift from God. If we don't defend it from conception to natural death, we are not good Christians," freshman Noah Korth said.

This year the school took one charter bus filled with 40 students and 10 chaperones all from the Columbus area. The pilgrimage began with a 22 hour bus ride to Washington on Tuesday, January 16, and ended on Sunday the 21st of January.

The day of the March was Friday, January 19th. Scotus pilgrims started the March at the Washington Monument and marched to the Supreme Court building.
"I loved the March but also my feet hurt really badly, but it was a sacrifice I was willing to take," freshman Kamryn Chohon said.

On their trip to Washington, students and chaperones had the chance to visit famous museums and monuments within the area. Many even rode the subway for the first time. Along with freshman Maddie Blaser, many agreed that the Holocaust was their most moving experience.
"My favorite place that we visited was the Holocaust Museum because it really put into perspective how bad the Holocaust really was for the Jews and other people who were killed," Blaser said.
"Respect for all life is important. Not only the unborn, but everyone who walks the earth. During and after the March, you notice the littlest things in people and how beautiful those things are about them even if it's something as little as someone smiling," senior Emily Carstens said.

Art adds history to the chapel

Stained glass windows, candles, and pictures of saints decorate the school's chapel, but there has never been anything to represent the school's namesake, Blessed John Duns Scotus. Scotus Chaplain Father Capadano along with president Jeff Ohnoutka had been searching for a relic of Scotus the past couple years, but came across none. Father then decided to consult senior artist Emily Carstens.

Senior Emily Carstens proudly displays her painting of Blessed John Duns Scotus while standing outside of the chapel.
"Emily was the first student I considered asking because her portraits look as if they were photographs of people that had been run through a 'pencil' graphic processor. Her attention to detail is exactly what one needs when doing an icon," Capadano said.

Carstens was willing to take up the challenge.
"I was a little hesitant at first and wasn't sure if I would be able to do it because it's something different from what I'm used to, but Father bought a board, and I started on it that day," Carstens said.

The task was unlike any other as she spent numerous hours sketching, erasing, and drawing the icon from her own perspective.
"The most difficult part of writing the icon was adapting a new technique and drawing it out. There aren't any icons of Scotus, so his face came from a few pieces of art that I'd found as well as how I imagined it would look," Carstens said.

The illustration depicts Blessed John Duns Scotus holding a statue of the Blessed Virgin Mary along with a scroll that says 'potuit decluit ergo fecit', which translates to "he did it because he could".

Father Capadano concluded, "I hope the students see the icon of Scotus and desire to know more about him and rely on his intercession for their studies. He was a brilliant man and a great student."

EXPLORATION THROUGH EXPERIENCES

The Scotus students had many opportunities to try new things this year, one of them being a whole school field trip to watch the solar eclipse. On the morning of August 21, 2017, the entire student body and staff of Scotus Central Catholic filled more than just a few buses to travel to Concordia University to watch a solar eclipse. This wholeschool field trip was organized by science teacher Joan Lahm. The day was filled with memories with friends and the unforgettable view of the total eclipse of the sun even though it only lasted for not even two minutes.
"I gasped, looking around at the darkness, and as I gazed up at the moon covering the sun, I teared up with how beautiful and amazing it was," junior Tara Kamrath described.

An overwhelming amount of students said they enjoyed the field trip to watch the eclipse and would like to go on another like this.
"I thought it was a super cool experience. I was so excited when I found out the whole school was going," sophomore Jaycee Ternus said.

While many were quite excited to watch the process of a solar eclipse, others looked at it as another way to spend some quality time with their classmates and friends.

Seventh grader Isaac Carstens said, "It was fun to hang out with my friends and exciting to see an eclipse for the first time."

The last solar eclipse took place in 1954 and will not happen again until 2024.

How did you react when the solar eclipse reached totality?

"It was really cool, and । screamed."

Konner Kudron, 11

"I was surprised because | didn't expect it to be as bright as it was."

Sarah Bichlmeier, 10

"I was shocked when it started to get colder and darker right before the solar eclipse reached totality."

In September, Chuck Hagel spoke to the Scotus students about his experiences as a previous U.S. Senator and U.S. Secretary of Defense. Scotus Central Catholic hosted a "Chuck Hagel Dinner" to help fund the up and coming STEAM lab. This will be put into place next year for students to use. This innovation will encourage students to further explore the ideas of Science, Technology, Engineering, Art, and Mathematics.

Learning through others' LIVEs

English teacher Becki Zanardi spends a unit every year with the sophomores talking about World War II and the Holocaust while reading the book Night. The sophomore class had the opportunity to listen to a Holocaust survivor speak this year to learn even more about World War II at an event that took place at the SAC Museum. This class was the first class to have the opportunity to take this trip.

EXPERIENCES IN ELECTIVES

Art is a common method of self-expression and a well-known language among enthusiasts of various forms of art. Someone who understands this is new art teacher Clyde Ericson.
"I have been drawing as long as I can remember. I initially enjoyed being able to imagine something and somehow making my imagination more real by putting it on paper," Ericson said.

Ericson said that as a child, he would ask for paper and a pencil rather than playing with tractors. One medium he enjoys working with is sculpture as he said it is challenging, yet rewarding.
"To me art has been a way of creating an experience through art making and recalling experiences or observations through the art I create. I enjoy the process of committing to something and not knowing exactly how it will turn out, knowing that there are multiple solutions to the problems I discover," Ericson said.

Some of the curriculum taught in the art classes offered included artmaking, art history, and art appreciation, which expose students to specific mediums, techniques, and concepts. The students ended the quarter with a project based on their choice. This allowed them to use different mediums that they wanted to use.

Ericson said, "Art has multiple functions such as reaching for a high standard of beauty or prompting a discussion about something that would otherwise go unappreciated."

What are some of the benefits of having technolgoy at Scotus?

TECHNOLOGY ADDS TO COURSES

At Scotus, all of the students have easy access to technology ranging from their cell phones to the computers in the Media Center. During last school year, Scotus added 280 Lenovos, similar to a laptop, to many classrooms so students could use technology without going to the computer lab. Students have noticed some benefits emerge from these laptops.
"I like the Lenovos because we do not have to wait for computers in the Media Center to be free," junior Abigail Stuart said.

Another advantage that students appreciate is having the opportunity to use computers in their classes.
"I think the Lenovos have definitely made class more efficient and productive, which saves a lot of time, and we could actually put ourselves to work," senior Flora He said.

The students are not the only people to recognize the advantages of the Lenovos at Scotus, but the staff also appreciates the laptops.
"They may not be the top of the line, but they are a great asset," English teacher Helen Schumacher said.

Schumacher uses the Lenovos in her classroom for quizzes, research, paper writing, projects, and grading, just as many other teachers use them for. Many teachers, including teachers who teach science, history, and English classes, have carts of Lenovos as well.

Advisors bulid leaders  Over the years, sponsors of organizations and sports come and go. This is not true for at least three major organizations at Scotus. Student Council advisor, Joan Lahm, has been heading the organization for the last 14 years. National Honor Society advisor, Jane Dusel-Misfeldt, has been in charge for the past 20 years. FBLA advisor, Patti Salyard, has lead her organization for the longest of the three for a total of 23 years.

From events like Mr. Shamrock, to No Shave November, to the Dodgeball Tournament, the student council has come up with many new ways to raise money for other organizations in the community.
"I do believe that we do more service projects than we've done in the past. We are more cognitive of helping others in the community as well as our own student body," Lahm said.

Like Lahm, Salyard has gotten Scotus FBLA more involved with community service and school projects. To name a few, FBLA puts on multiple food drives, holds decorating contests, and runs the football concession stands. With that many activities going on throughout the years, there were always jobs to be done.

"When I first started, I didn't know what was going on. Now it's a little easier to just let go and let the students do it," Salyard said.

Each member gets points based on the number of events they help with or attend. At the end of the year, members are then awarded for their hard work by getting the chance to attend the state leadership conference if they have enough points.

Dusel - Misfeldt has spent the last 20 years at Scotus working with other student leaders. She enjoys helping students to find out how they can become better leaders as well as helping them see how they already lead, even when they don't acknowledge their abilities themselves.
"As a member of NHS sometimes people don't think of themselves as leaders, and they are. Sometimes I can see it, but they might not even think about the fact that they are leading there," Dusel - Misfeldt said.

Each of these advisors have made their organizations thrive, and they will continue to do so until they find the right time to end their journeys at Scotus.

Why are you a member of this organization?

"My favorite thing about HOSA is the opportunity to explore the medical field and recieve first-person exposure to different practices. It helps to look at potential career decisions so closely."

"My favorite part about HOSA was attending the HOSA convention in Omaha and seeing the different positions in the medical field."

Emily Drew

"I enjoyed making treats as well as eating the treats at the bake sale. It also helped raise money for a great cause."

Dalton

Kendra

Flourishung in numbers

Two activities that have thrived in popularity at Scotus are Health Occupations Students of America (HOSA) and powerlifting, a form of competitive lifting. Both groups believe that with more people comes a positive outcome.

Junior Emma Brandt is in her first year as a powerlifter. She thinks the number of people positively increases the atmosphere in the weight room.
"The more people involved, the louder it is. I love when there are a ton of people because everyone is yelling and encouraging each other," Brandt said.

Despite the large number of people out for powerlifting, freshman Madison Wittwer said the coaches still make an impact on her time in the weight room.
"The coaches are the most helpful part of powerlifting, and they really do care about how we do at meets and individually in the weight room," Wittwer said.

HOSA, an organization that gives students the opportunity to explore the health field, has increased in numbers over the years. Science teacher Joan Lahm is in charge of HOSA.
"We had 12 members the first year and then 15 the second year. This year we had 33 members. We were able to go to two hospitals in Omaha, so we were able to have more students involved in health experiences by going to different workshops. This gives them the idea if the health field is right for them," Lahm said.

Junior and president Mira Liebig has been involved in HOSA for two years. She joined because it helps her find her career path in the medical field.
"HOSA is a great program to get involved in the medical field. This program opens you up to new jobs and careers. It also helps us to work as a group," Liebig said.

As president, Liebig helped coordinate fundraisers and trips to SLC.
"I chose to be involved in HOSA so I could become closer to finding my career path and help others find their way," Liebig concluded.

Finding their inner "Freak'  Suicide is a rising issue in today's society as it is a contributor to the leading causes of death among teenagers. The One Act team this year brought light to the subject in their production of "FREAK" by Angela Hill. In this play, Monique, played by senior Alaina Wallick, is greeted by several characters who are considered 'freaks' and have sent themselves to the 'freak show' by killing themselves."I liked it. It helped raise awareness of suicide and how words affect others," senior Jenna Salerno said.

(top) The main cast of the One Act play this year try talking senior Alaina Wallick's character into killing herself. (bottom) Junior Maddie Sueper explains that there is hope. Freshmen Noah Korth, Simon Pichler, and Ben Merrill act as the comic relief in the play. Senior Jared Gaspers plays his character of Benny the Batboy. Freshman Mckenna Mausbach acts as Hope.

What character did you play in the One Act this year?

"I was Bella. She came to this world because she did not think she was pretty enough so she peeled her skin off." Caitlin Steiner, 12

"My character was Max. He is a manizal maniac and the head hancho. He controls the freaks and makes sure everything is in line."

Brandon Huynh, 12

"I was Kitty. The whole play | explain how lonely I feel. I got no attention and no one wanted to talk to me. I acted crayy to get people to notice me."

Speaking to succerd

In past years, Scotus has dominated district mock trial. This year, the Scotus seniors had the opportunity of making it even further. After hours of hard work and practice, they soon found themselves in the state final at the end of the season, making Scotus history by taking second place.
"Mock trial was such a great experience. It has taught me so much. I wouldn't trade the memories for anything," senior Natalie Brutty said.

There are different parts that take place in a mock trial competition. Some of these roles include attorneys and witnesses.
"We would have practices every Sunday. Each witness worked with his/her attorney to develop questions the attorney would ask then the witness would have to remember the answers to the questions," freshman Cassie Kouma said.

Mock trial gives students an opportunity to get an authentic look at cases and each part that takes place in a trial and possibly even spark interest in a career being a lawyer or an attorney.
"The thing that I like most about being an attorney is cross examination. Watching witnesses squirm because they have to answer a question that they don't want to answer is so fun," junior Elliott Thomazin said.

One thing is for sure, through all of the time and effort put in by each of the mock trial teams, many agreed that it had created close friendships and a team bond throughout their experiences.
"I love that mock trial gave me a chance to begin pursuing my dream while forming some of the best friendships in the process," senior Faith Przymus said.

1. Senior Jenna Salerno gives the opening statement for a competition. 2. Sophomore Liza Zaruba plays her part as a witness in the case. 3. Junior Hallie Parker answers questions as a witness. 4. Senior Trey Dallman acts as a withess during the case. 5. The freshmen mock trial team poses for a photo after their first ever competition against the Scotus sophomores. 6. Sophomore Chloe Odbert cross examines the other team's witness.
2. Junior Elliott Thomazin prepares to speak as an attorney for the case.
3. Junior Drew Zaruba is cross examined by the opposing team's attorney. 9. Junior Emma Brandt is interrogated at a competition.
4. The Scotus senior mock trial team gets together to discuss during a break. 11. Sophomore Brea Lassek gets ready to give the closing statement for the competition.

Early Saturday mornings during the winter are met with nothing but love from speech team members. From late night practices revising and memorizing speeches to remaking visual aids for the third time during the season, there's no doubt about it: speech team is quite unique to other extra curricular activities.
"When I was a 7th grader, I went to watch my brother compete with his OID, and ever since then, I wanted to do that," junior Isaac Ostdiek said.
Students join speech team for a myriad of reasons, but most decide to so they are able to work on the necessary and lifelong skill of public speaking.
"I joined speech to help conquer my fear of speaking in public. I also enjoy seeing everybody's speeches," sophomore Katie Stachura said. While the past season had many returning members, there were also a few new faces to the team who were ready to try out something new.
"I had always wanted to do speech, but dance always got in the way. I just decided to go for it my last year," senior Jenna Salerno said.
Many speech team members broke at least once throughout the season, sending them to finals to place in the top 6 at the meet after placing well in their preliminary rounds.
"My favorite meet of the year was state because I loved competing against such great speakers, and I was super happy with the results," sophomore Lauren Ostdiek said.
Ostdiek placed 4th at the state competition in Kearney with an entertainment speech about decision making. Other state competitors included seniors Logan Zanardi and Alaina Wallick in duet, junior Hannah Allen in Informative, and the Oral Interpretation of Drama which consisted of seniors Logan Zanardi, Alaina Wallick, Brandon Huynh, and juniors Isaac Ostdiek and Isaac McPhillips.

What is your favorite memory from this season?

"Being with my team. We are all so close and get along well."

What is the greatest memory you had in the musical?

SINGING WITH SISTERS

With the lights, costumes, make up, and music, the members and cast of this year's musical were prepared to make yet another memorable and unforgettable performance presenting Sister Act. Junior Maddie Sueper portrayed Deloris Van Cartier and junior Mattie Johnson played the role of Mother Superior.
"Outside of school practice, it was hard to try to learn all of our songs and lines because I had so many of them," Sueper said. "I used my voice memos app a lot on my phone. I'd record myself speaking and try to fill in the blanks as I went. This helped a lot."

Another prominent cast member in the musical was senior Caitlin Steiner, who played Sister Mary Robert. Steiner has been involved in the musical for several years.
"I have been participating in musicals since I was six years old. There is no way I was going to miss the musical my senior year," Steiner said.

As the performance dates came closer, the cast members started to increase their practice time. Senior Matthew Strecker was recruited to play the part of Monsignor O'Hara and attended rehearsals after basketball practice.
"I started coming to practice with about three weeks left to rehearse, and I had to cram my lines and movements as fast as possible," Strecker said.

The co-directors Laura Salyard and Helen Schumacher decided to do Sister Act because of the large number of actresses who went out. There were nineteen nuns and seven male roles. Together, there were thirty-two people who made up the cast and crew.
"My favorite part of being in the musical is getting to meet a bunch of new people. The musical cast is truly a family who helps lift each other up and is encouraging each other throughout the entire season," Sueper said.

"My opening scene in the beginning of the play. I really get to make the audience get a taste of what they're about to get themselves into."
Brandon
Huynh, 12

"My favorite part of the play was the end when Trey was erasing Brandon. I thought it was so bad, that it became funny."

FRST TIME IN SPOTUGHT

Every year Scotus Central Catholic puts on a spring play that is student directed. This year the play was about an insecure artist trying to find his way in the comic book world, Comic Book Artist. One of the three student directors was senior Emily Carstens.
"I enjoyed directing because we had a super awesome cast to work with this year. They were a lot of fun and would show up to practice ready to work and put the show together," Carstens said.

This year there were a few students who stepped on stage for their first time. Even though they are involved in other activities, they decided to try something new. One of those students was junior Elliott Thomazin, who played the role of Triple Time.
"It was a blast! I highly recommend everyone in Scotus to be a part of some sort of theater production. I learned a lot about myself and theater in general," Thomazin said.

Another student who was in the play for the first time was junior Patrick Herchenbach. He played the role of Mr. Wonderman.
"[Since it is student directed] it gets confusing/frustrating when there are three directors, and they do not always agree," Herchenbach said.

Senior Trey Dallman went out for spring play for the first time and earned a leading role.
"I absolutely loved every second of it. It is definitely one of the best experiences I've ever had, and I wish I would have gone out for it years ago," Dallman said.

The spring play was presented to the three elementary schools in Memorial Hall. The following Sunday it was presented again to the community.

ERFECTING THE PERFORMANCE

Numerous concerts, national anthems, and competitions, make for a year full of preparation and improvement for the Shamrock Singers.
"When I first joined Shamrock Singers, I sang quieter than others. Now you can actually hear the different tones that I sing," senior tenor Bryan Littlefield said.

A few of the members of Shamrock Singers got the privilege of singing solos throughout the year, and they received outstanding scores at districts.

(above) Music director Laura Salyard welcomes the audience to the Christmas vocal concert. This was Ms. Salyard's third year at Scotus.
"I got a one on my solo for the first time, so I was very happy with it," senio alto/tenor Jenna Salerno said.

The Singers welcomed many new freshmen to the group. At first this was a challenge, but they found a way to work all their singing together.
"The most challenging part was that it was our final year to continue to make Shamrock Singers into the amazing program it is. It was also hard because we had so many new people this year that we had to take a couple steps back for the freshmen. It was difficult, but they got it figured out," seniof bass Brock Kracman said.

The team competed well at districts. They received a superior rating which is the highest ranking a team could have received.
"Districts was amazing this year. We all performed very well, and I was happy with the results. I am very proud of all of us for how well we did at districts," junior bass Patrick Herchenbach said.

Becoming close to a group and being able to work out all the challenges together makes saying goodbye rather difficult.
"I will miss the family atmosphere of the class. The altos got yelled at for talking more than we actually sang. I'll miss talking to them everyday," senior alto Caitlin Steiner said.

ENhancing the entertainment

From half time shows to parades, the flag team is always on the move. They practice week after week to bring new dances and routines to perform for the Scotus community. They show their excitement, energy, and school pride to the audience with each performance they present.
"The flag team adds entertainment during half time at basketball and football. During the pep rally, the flag team gets the whole school cheering and on their feet," sophomore Makenzie Enderlin said.

Most mornings the team can be found practicing in Memorial Hall to get their routines perfected before the next game or pep rally. With so little time between each event and the need for new entertainment, the group prepares each dance in less than a month's time.
"What a lot of people don't realize is that we pull routines together in two to three weeks. At dance studios we spend an entire year practicing an hour a week on just one dance," senior Caitlin Steiner said.

With each girl's dedication to the group comes a drive to perform to the best of their ability. For some it's the thrill of the performance, and for others it's the feeling of acceptance in the group.
"Many students enjoy sports like volleyball, basketball, or football. However, for some people, dance is their sport. The flag team allows people interested in dancing [a way] to participate in a school activity," freshman and school spirit centered on the theme of "All Around the World." All different cultures were shown through the class decorations of their hallways. The week was then followed by the Friday night football game against David City Aquinas. The Shamrocks fought for the win, yet didn't come out on top. Meanwhile, the flag corps and the cheer squad performed their homecoming dances during half time.

HOMECOMING AROUND THE WORLD  The week of homecoming began with costumes

"Performing our homecoming dance was fun because we have been practicing the routine since summer," sophomore Molly Carstens said.

After the football game, all twelve of the homecoming candidates were announced and called onto the field. Senior Faith Przymus and Nathan Donoghue were crowned the king and queen of the 2017 Homecoming Coronation.

The dance was on the following night after the coronation, finishing off the week of activities.
"My favorite part about homecoming was how much enthusiasm every student and teacher brought to the dance. It was a very energetic and fun-filled night; it was the best dance I have ever been to at Scotus,"

Przymus said.

The student council, who is in charge of the homecoming dance, voted to have the dance on Saturday for the third year in a row.
"The most memorable part of the dance was when Tommy danced in the center of the circle," sophomore MaKenzie Enderlin said.

After the success of last year's homecoming dance, the DJ was asked back for a second homecoming dance.
"I really enjoyed the dance. I thought it was very fun and the music was good. I liked the DJ, and I thought everyone was having a great time," junior Mattie Johnson said. "I loved the Spanish music that played; we need to keep the Spanish jams rolling."

The dance ended at eleven at night, yet for many classes the party didn't stop there. Many classes had a breakfast to finish up the night.

What was your first/last homecoming like?

"My last homecoming was a blast; everyone danced the night away and participated."

"My first homecoming was super fun and very memorable. I got to dance with a lot of people which I liked! It was also fun to just be around so many people dancing and having fun. My favorite part was everyone dancing in a big circle."

"My last homecoming was amazing, a day to be remembered forever. My favorite part was dancing with everyone."

Seniors Nathan Donoghue, Faith Przymus, Chase Andresen, Elley Beaver, Brandon Huynh, Natalie Brutty, Colson Kosch. Grace Odbert, Nathan Donoghue, Tessa Bridger, Trevor Kaslon, Faith Przymus, Jake Novicki, and Jenna Salerno were all candidates for the homecoming coronation after the foothall game Friday night.

Formal, fun but fast

Right after Christmas break, the student body was welcomed back by Winter Formal, which was only one day after students were back from break. Since Winter Formal was so soon, many students were rushed and stressed about the dance.
"[Preparing right after break] was kind of stressful because I got my dress the week before," freshman Janae Rusher said.

Even though the dance came up so quickly, it did not stop the students from coming and enjoying the dance with their friends.

Many who attended the dance enjoyed seeing the wild and crazy sides of their friends. They also loved dancing and having a good time.
"I liked all of the socializing and dancing with my friends because it's a fun way to see the energetic sides of people," junior Caden Pelan said.

Other students appreciated listening to their favorite songs and being able to sing at the top of their lungs without being made fun of.
"[My favorite song was] 'Party in the USA' because I was the chick that was rockin kicks," junior Julia Pichler said.

For many of the students this was their last dance, and they wanted to enjoy the most of it. One of the major events of Winter Formal is the crowning of the king and queen. The winners were seniors Matthew Bichlmeier and Alaina Wallick.
"Winning Winter Formal queen was definitely my favorite part of the dance. Nothing could have prepared me for that, and it just felt amazing!" Wallick said.

Who had the best dance moves at prom?

Prom in Central Park

Prom in Central Park was a night for the books, to say the least. Juniors, seniors, and their dates all gathered in the Scotus cafeteria for a dinner catered by Husker House followed by dancing and more fun.

Senior Alaina Wallick attended her last Scotus dance in the cafeteria.
"The most memorable part was definitely watching Binky (Matthew Bichlmeier) dance to the centipede song," Wallick said.

Junior Emma Brandt attended the prom with Elliott Thomazin.
"Elliott and I learned how to swing dance right before we came to prom, so the best part was definitely swing dancing in front of everyone at the actual dance," Brandt said.

The popular opinion of this year's prom was the amount of fun had by students compared to dances in the past.
"The reason prom was so much fun this year was because of the great music that the DJ played. At past dances, the music wasn't as good," senior Maggie Feehan said.

Post prom was once again held at Scotus in the gyms and the cafeteria. Activities included laser tag, inflatables, board games, a magician, and many prizes. Senior Brock Kracman won a $$ 25$ gift card to HyVee gas.
"The best part of post prom was playing laser tag," Kracman said.

Prom 2018 concluded at 4 o'clock Sunday morning with students returning home to sleep the day away.

SHAMROCK SPOTUGHT

There are many traditions at school that have been a continuous success with a positive outcome. The Mr. Shamrock contest is an example.

The contest allows the senior boys to show off their talents by raising money and collecting canned goods for the Simon House. This is one reason senior Matt Strecker thinks the Mr. Shamrock tradition should continue.
"I think a lot of students, parents, and teachers get a kick out of it, and it's a fun way to raise money and food for people who need it," Strecker said.

Getting on stage to perform is not something most people have the chance to do. Tyler Miksch thought he would give this opportunity a try.
"I wanted to do something that was a little out of my comfort zone before I graduated, and this was the perfect opportunity to do so," Miksch said.

The contestants agreed that competing in the contest is something worth taking part in. Senior Wren Allen said his favorite part was watching one of his fellow contestant's performance.
"It was a lot of fun to participate in Mr. Shamrock. My favorite part was watching Brandon and Jake do their beach ball ballerina," Allen said.

One big reason that some chose to do the contest was to make many people laugh and entertain them through the contest's humor.
"I made a fool of myself and underachieved, but I am glad that I did it," senior Nathan Donoghue concluded.

The judges this year were teachers Pat Brockhaus and Becki Zanardi, senior Faith Pryzmus, and senior Alaina Wallick. Huynh came out on top winning the Mr. Shamrock contest with Miksch finishing runner up.

Picturing victory

Through camera clicks, layouts, and articles, the journalism staff hit the pinnacle of their season in Norfolk at the state championship contest. Going into state, the Scotus journalism team was predicted to come out in third place. Failing to submit in any Broadcasting categories, a new event this year, nothing stopped the Shamrocks from excelling to a back to back State Championship.
"It's great that we pulled the upset and came up on top even though we were not picked to win. I think it's the year for upsets," senior Maggie Feehan said.

As the underdogs, the journalism team medaled more than one person in 9 different events. In the 17 categories the students were qualified in, they received 25 out of the 35 possible medals.
"I told the kids that we had enough qualifying entries to win, but that we would have to do really well in every category to pull it off. They did great, other schools did not do as well as predicted, and it all came together for another win," journalism advisor Angie Rusher said.

With sweeping the competition in 2017, the students went into the competition with a lot of pressure; they knew they had to do everything possible if they wanted to come home with gold around their necks.
"I thought I had totally bombed it coming out of my first round which was Newspaper Layout. Then to my surprise I got first place! The Lord works in crazy ways," junior Abram Perault said.

Throughout the course of the year, the journalism classes worked on numerous projects to build their skills for that moment. Coming from behind made the victory for the 2018 journalism staff seem a bit sweeter.
"It was very exciting. Going into the day of state, we were behind by a lot of points, but everyone on the team was able to compete well. The win was unexpected, but very satisfying. All of the work that the team had put in over the last year was finally worth it," senior Jacob Morse said.

Celebrating success

The students at Scotus are not only involved in their studies throughout the year; many students take advantage of the number of extra-curricular activities offered at Scotus and excel in them as well. Honors Night and the Athletic Banquet recognize students for their talents in academics, fine arts, and athletics.
"Often times the school receives comments how we acknowledge athletics, but we are also a school of academic excellence, and so it's our night to showcase our kids' academic abilities," Scotus counselor Pam Weir said.

Honors Night recognizes students for their success in individual classes as well as their involvement in organizations such as Student Council, Campus Ministry, and HOSA. Seniors and other students receive scholarships at the event. Once all the awards are given out, the night is concluded in the cafeteria at the Athletic

Banquet.

"So many people invest so much time and effort in those things and to some of them that's the most important thing to do. It's a nice evening to recognize the people who have been successful in those things, and who are good at those things," activities director Merlin Lahm said.

One of the most honorable awards at the Athletic Banquet is the presentation of the new inductees of the Shamrock Athletic Hall of Fame, which recognizes student-athletes, coaches and athletic directors, and boosters.

Development director John Schueth said, "The Shamrock Athletic Hall of Fame celebrates tradition of effort and success. It engages people with Scotus which converts to support."

Which upperclassman do you look up to and aspire to be and why?

Scotus Central Catholic is a team. We win together, lose together, celebrate together, and cry together. From not making football playoffs to winning a basketball state title, saying goodbye to our seniors to cheering from the bench or in the crowd, we all share the emotions and love of the game.

Scotus is home to 364 students with over $90 \%$ being involved in sports and activities. Over the years Scotus has won 45 state titles in the athletic department alone.

Championships are won through the teamwork of an athletic group, not through an individual person. Scotus is a team; many strive by themselves but rise with the help of their teammates. Injuries, playing time, and inexperience doesn't hold the team back from rising to the top. If anything, it makes the team stronger in the fight to victory.

At Scotus we aren't just building memories but building character and legacies, setting the bar for students in the future.

UNDERCLASSMEN INVOLVEMENT

It is always the dream for a young Shamrock fan to grow up and mold into a Rowdy Dowdy. Each year, a new batch of underclassmen come in with the anticipation of cheering in the student section.

Seventh grader Alex Zoucha always looked forward to sitting in the student section for the first time.
"I felt old, but I am short, so I couldn't see over any of the taller people," Zoucha said.

One of the big reasons that the junior high kids come to games is to socialize with their friends and fellow classmates.
"I really enjoy [being a part of the student section], and I love how we can hang out with our friends," freshman Christina

Oakley said.
All the indoor sports draw big student sections which makes the cheering louder. What comes along with sitting in the student section is having a favorite cheer.
"My favorite cheer is 'I believe that we just won' because that means we have won the game," seventh grader Claire Rickert said.

Although student sections aren't a part of the NSAA activities, being a Rowdy Dowdy is a tradition that all students enjoy being a part of.
"It's one of the most exciting experiences at Scotus to take part in," eighth grader Eden Broberg concluded.

DOING IT ALL

The Scotus cheerleaders started their season off before any other team and ended late in the spring. In July the squad attended NCA Cheer Camp at UNL. The cheerleaders competed against other squads the last day at camp and came home with a championship trophy in the game day performance, a spirit stick, and the spirit award for the 4th year in a row. Sophomore Brea Lassek, junior Kendra Korger, and senior Grace Wickham all made the NCA All-American team.
"The highlight of the cheer season was definitely either the homecoming dance or cheer camp. Both really brought the squad together; they were both so much fun!" sophomore Liza Zaruba said. When school started in August, along with innumerable practices, preparing their homecoming dance and marching in three parades, the cheerleaders led the crowd at home and away events for volleyball and football games followed by basketball and wrestling in the winter. Through the countless events, the cheerleaders grew closer to one another throughout the year.
"They are all like my sisters. We have such a fun time whenever we are together. We act so goofy and laugh so hard when we are around eachother," sophomore Haylee Cielocha said.

The cheerleaders also got to stand on the floor at Pinnacle Bank Arena as they led the crowd during the Class C1 Girls State Championship basketball game.
"Cheering at state basketball was so fun. Watching the girls' faces light up when they won was the best feeling," senior Jenna Salerno said.

The cheerleaders ended their season at State Cheer, placing runner-up in Sideline and third in the Game-day category.

Cheerleading has allowed girls at Scotus to have another sport to participate in.
"Cheer was something that helped me grow; it

SHCES OF IMPROVEMENT

As the chemistry grew amongst the girls' golf team this fall, the scores continued to drop.
Throughout the season, individual scores continued to improve, and by the end of the season, the team qualified for the state tournament. Although the team was predicted to play in the state tournament after attending it the last five years, getting there all depended on the team committing time to practices and meets.
"I think our team improved a lot over the course of the season. We all knew we were improving as well, which made us want to work harder," senior Emily Carstens said.

Over the course of the season, the varsity team took first place at four of their meets.
"One of our team goals this season was to shoot under 400," junior Hannah Allen said. "We accomplished this at two meets, so now we get bucket hats."

As districts approached, the pressure was on to lower their scores even further.

Districts were held at the Fremont Country Club, one of the most difficult courses the girls had played all season. The team took second place at the district meet with a score of 449 and advanced to the state tournament.
"[I felt] relieved and happy because districts was at a hard course," senior Kaitlyn Enderlin said.

The team ended their season at the Lake Maloney Golf Course in North Platte by tying for sixth place at the state tournament with a two-day score of 812 . It was a tough season for the team, but they ended on a high note.

Senior Maddie Neville said, "We did our best. We all tried as hard as we could and just tried to have fun."

Finding Victories in the IITTLE THNGS

Despite being lower than usual in numbers, the Scotus/CHS co-op softball and tennis teams fought hard all season, the softball girls ending with a $14-29$ win/loss record and the tennis boys finishing the season with a record of $0-6$ in tournaments. Though the records don't show it, many individual goals were met.

Sophomore Adam Kamrath was the only Scotus athlete on the varsity tennis team.
"I feel like I really improved on hitting the ball harder. I used to hit cautiously because I was afraid of hitting it out," Kamrath said.

Senior Marika Spencer led the softball team in points.
"I broke the home run record with 21 home runs, and 9 for a season," Spencer said.
Both the softball and tennis seasons did not go quite as planned, but both teams found a way to enjoy the season through 'little victories.'

Sophomore Sydney Martinsen played outfield for the Discoverers.
"The most memorable game of the season was probably when we beat Millard West. It was such a good feeling!" Martinsen said.

Sophomore catcher Kate Smith also commented on the Millard North win.
"We had been crushed by them earlier in the week, so being able to cause a huge upset against the number three ranked team was pretty awesome!" Smith said.

Both the softball and tennis seasons were a battle to the end with the softball girls losing to Grand Island during districts, and the tennis boys falling to Norfolk to finish off the 2017 season.

worst conditioning that you've done.

Kate

II think that the toughest conditioning was the mile run."

"I can't remember what the drill was, but you run back and forth between the bases and do crunches in between sets."

The road to recovery

With a year of interruptions and challenges, the girls' cross country team still found a way to push through.

Sophomore Liza Zaruba said, "Going into this season, I really thought I was going to be the weakest link on the team because I was just coming back from breaking my leg. Injury after injury began occurring, and I knew I had to step up and run even faster for the girls who physically couldn't. All of the injuries were definitely hard on the team's morale, so I really tried to step up to keep spirits high and the team hopeful."

The girls started off the season coming back with first-place plaques for the first three meets then due to some interruptions they fell short.

Freshman Emily Ferguson said, "This season went really well as a whole this year. We had a lot of injuries, which was hard, but our team still did really well."

The Shamrocks have always held their Scotus Invite at Lutjelusche, which to many has always been a tough race.

Freshman Abai Aydt said, "The course that stands out the most is Lutjelusche because we ran it so many times, and it always had a new situation or surprise when we ran it."

Everyone has a goal that they want to achieve by the end of the season; some achieve it and others don't.
"I wanted to become a better runner and make more friends. I also heard about the hills on Lutjelusche, and I wanted to try and race on them. By the end of the season, I had gotten in better shape and had lots of upper-class friends," freshman Keira Feehan said.

The girls received runner up at districts returning them to state for the ninth year in a row.

This was senior Grace Odbert's not only first state meet but also first time competing on the Shamrock's cross country team.

Odbert said, "I felt very excited! With the whole cross country experience being new, state was new too, and I was excited all the hard work paid off."

The team ended with a record of 99-8 and made many memories doing it.

Junior Kelsey Faust said, "I miss cross country so much already! I love my teammates, and I am already looking forward to next season with them.

MAKING SMALL STEPS

For the past few years, the Scotus boys' cross country team has made it to the state meet. Even though this year was a little different, the team still had some runners who stepped up from last year.
"I think that Nathan Schumacher, Carter Thorson, and Lucas Schaeacher all improved the most because they were always pushing each other whether that be at practice or at a meet," sophomore Tyler Vaught said.

Several team members participated in the summer morning runs because they had big shoes to fill from last year.

This season the Scotus boys' team placed well at the Scotus Invite placing 5th as a team and achieving 2nd place as a team at the Boone Central Invite in Albion.
"To prepare myself for the season, many cross country runners and I ran 200 miles during the summer so we could make improvements before the season. Tyler Vaught and Carter Thorson helped push me during these morning runs, which did not just benefit me but helped them too," junior Nathan Schumacher said.

The two runners who led the boys' team during the season were junior Elliott Thomazin and freshman Michael Gasper. They both placed well in several meets, and the two Scotus boys' runners made the trip to the state meet and placed 28th and 54 th, respectively. Despite the fact that only two runners qualified for state, the team still had several runners who performed well throughout the season, which helped improve the talent and morale on the team.
"This year was really special. We lost some good runners last year, so this year was a journey to find out who was going to step up and start running well," Thomazin said.

Even though the Scotus boys fell short on competing at the state meet as a team, they will return every varsity runner.

EMbracing THE JOURNEY

With a year of change, the Shamrocks volleyball team had to make many adjustments.
One major change was Janet Tooley returning to coaching after a three-year hiatus.

Tooley said, "When the opening came up for the position, with the time of year it was going to be hard to advertise, and once we discussed some of the conflicts I was going to have and got all the logistics figured out, it just made sense that I would be the one to come back in and do it since I did it in the past."

Tooley inspired the team with unique ideas like giving them beads after special events throughout their journey during the season.

Head Coach Janet

Tooley observes from the sideline as her team competes in the Columbus Chamber of Commerce Tournament. Tocley has cooched at Scotus for 27 years.

Senior defensive specialist Jadyn Larsen said, "She believed in us and for the most part kept a positive attitude. I'm glad she got to coach us this year. I don't know how we could have made it without her."

With a record of 17-11, the Shamrocks had some huge upsets against Grand Island Central Catholic, Bishop Neumann, and Lincoln Lutheran.

Senior right-side hitter Madison Kerkman said, "Grand Island Central Catholic was our best win because we showed everyone that we could beat top teams."

The season had some ups and downs, but the girls always found a way to get out of the slump.

Senior libero Kayla Hall said, "The turning point of the season was the Omaha Bryan Tournament because we gained a lot of confidence as a team."

The Shamrocks defeated Bishop Neumann and Aquinas to get to the conference championship where they fell short against Concordia.

Senior defensive specialist Grace Wickham said, "There were many ups and downs, but we did our best to be the best players and teammates we could be."

The Shamrocks lost to North Bend at the second round of districts to end their season.

Building block

The Shamrock football team came out ready to fight this season, but fell short in many areas. The Shamrocks were off to a rough start, failing to win a game and starting out 0-4, but these losses did not stop the team from giving it everything they had.
"I know our record wasn't pretty and people stopped believing in us when we were 0-4 or 1-5, but I wouldn't want to battle every Friday with anyone else but my team and coaches," senior Matt Strecker said.

The boys showed their strengths in their three wins against GICC, Ord, and Adams-Central. The unforgettable game at Ord allowed the team to get down and dirty to win 14-10.
"The field was mostly mud, and our uniforms were brown in the end. It was just a really fun, crazy game and we came out on top; it is a game I will never forget," senior Colson Kosch added.

Senior Jake Novicki was a two-year starter for the Shamrocks.

The offensive and defensive lineman concluded, "This season was an outlier. The upcoming teams are going to be battle-tested, which will help them secure more victories for this proud football school."

The team defeated Adams-Central 41-21 in the seniors' final football game as Shamrocks finishing their season 3-6.

Who inspired you the most this season?

"I think Nathan D. inspired the team this year. With Donnie's motivation, we stanted 'DIFO' (Do it for Donnie). We wanted everything we did on the field to be for him.

Becoming the best

Every athlete dreams of their season ending with a gold medal around his or her neck, but only a few get to live the experience. The Scotus girls' basketball team peaked at the right time in the season to defeat their arch nemesis Lincoln Christian, punch their ticket to state, and win a state championship.
"Playing for each other and for an injured teammate makes the victory a little bit sweeter. We played harder and had more endurance," senior guard Grace Wickham said.

With the win against Christian, the girls were 19-5 entering the state tournament with plenty of confidence despite having to face the new number one ranked team Wahoo.
"We knew that if we could beat Christian, we could beat anyone. Beating Lincoln Christian propelled us into the state tournament knowing we had the talent and ability to win it," senior guard Kendra Wiese said.

The Shamrock's defense was a major factor in their success as they held the Warriors to their lowest scoring of the season at 32 points. The following morning, the girls played undefeated Mitchell, whose record was 27-0. Again, their defense was rock solid only allowing 26 points. The girls won 43-26 advancing them to the state championship.
"We really focused on not letting their best player beat us, so we were aware of where she was and played tough help defense off the ball," senior post Shania Borchers said.

The state title game was a rematch between the Shamrocks and the Bishop Neumann Cavaliers. Earlier in the season, the Cavaliers defeated the Shamrocks with a buzzer beater. The state championship game was just as intense as the girls trailed most of the game, but a three pointer from junior forward Bailey Lehr sent the game into overtime.

"In the middle of the third quarter I had tears in my eyes because we couldn't get a lead, and I thought the game was over, but after making the three, I had all the confidence in my team to win it," Lehr said.

The Shamrocks defeated the Cavaliers with a final score of 40-37. Their season ended with a record of 22-5, and the first girls' basketball championship in 14 years.

Senior point-guard Maggie Feehan concluded, "Basketball has taught me that by just taking a little time out of each day to work at whatever it is you love, and playing alongside great teammates, you might just find yourself a few years down the road with a gold medal around your neck."

Gaining momentum

Scotus boys' basketball has been the epicenter of high school basketball in Nebraska. After graduating a large number of seniors who had a great amount of varsity experience, the team had to grow in this area in order to find success.
"The difference between this year and previous years was how we grew over the year. We had the same goal to win state, but we knew to get there we were going to need to work harder than ever before and develop as a team," senior Trevor Kaslon said.

This basketball season gave the opportunity for many players to play in a varsity game for the first time in their high school careers. These players were unable to see the court in past years due to the vastness of talent that the team possessed in the past few seasons.
"Previous years I sat on the bench and never played, but this year I was able to start, making this year way different," senior Matthew Strecker said.

Despite the fact that the basketball team had very little varsity experience, they still managed to fight through this obstacle by making steps from last year.
"I thought everyone stepped up and improved from last year. Everyone made themselves better throughout the summer and basketball season and really improved themselves," junior Caden Pelan said.

This season the team was able to defeat some of their rivals from previous years, such as upsetting Wahoo Neumann and beating crosstown rival Lakeview High School. Their season concluded in a close matchup against David City Aquinas in sub-districts and ended the year with a record of $8-15$.
"My favorite part about basketball was everyone I developed relationships with, everyone who made practices fun, and all of the coaches who pushed me to be my best," Kaslon said. attempts to pass the ball during a game against Norfolk Catholic. ## PiN IT TO WIN IT

This year the Scotus wrestling team had a coaching change, making DJ Brandenburg the new head coach. Being his first year as head coach, the Scotus Shamrocks were successful. One of the duals they won was the Mount Michael dual, winning it 42-26.
"[The turning point was] the Mount Michael dual when I got two pins; it boosted my confidence," sophomore Brock Clarke said.

Two of their better meets were conference, and the JV team at the Neumann Invite, where they both got second. These two meets led up to districts.
"[The match that stands out the most is] my match at districts because wrestling a kid from Skutt taught me that it is not all about strength," junior Daniel Tworek explained.

Seniors Landon Sokol and Wren Allen made it to state after winning their matches at districts to earn their spots. After getting a spot, preparing for the matches became the main focus.
"Preparing for state was more of a mental thing. Wren and I both knew we were in the best shape so we decided to run for ten minutes to get warmed up, then we wrestled," Sokol said.

Both Sokol and Allen made it past the first rounds of state which led to the seconed day.
"I was sad after my last match because I knew I would never step on a mat as a competitor ever again. Fourteen years of wrestling had actually come to an end; it was tough to walk off the mat for the last time," Allen said.

sSWIMMING FOR A CHANCE

The Scotus swimmers have always been a part of the Scotus/CHS co-op team, but this year they had a great impact on the team. Senior captain Chase Andresen was involved all four years and got to know people from both schools.
"It's nice to have a bigger team and to have the opportunity to meet new people," Andresen said.

The swim team attended many meets throughout the season including wins against Fremont and South Sioux.
"The state and conference meets are my favorite because a lot of good teams are there, and you always seem to drop time," sophomore Emily Miksch said.

The swimmers get the opportunity to qualify their times for state throughout the season. Seven out of thirteen of the swim members who made it to state were from Scotus.
"It was special because almost all Scotus swimmers got the opportunity to go and swim at state. I think that is an awesome accomplishment for all of us to say," junior Julia Salerno said.

The swim team is saying goodbye to Andresen and seniors Thiago Pereira and Trey Dallman. Dallman has qualified for state all four years of high school.

Dallman concluded, "There's a moment of anticipation when you're on the block waiting for your race to start, and when you jump off and hit the water, it is pure bliss. You forget about everything, and your body takes over. That feeling is what I'll miss the most."

OVERCOMING THE WEATHER

The Scotus Central Catholic girls' soccer team made it back to state for the eighth year in a row. The soccer team had many setbacks due to the weather but were still able to pull through and earn a spot at state.
"It's always a great feeling playing at Morrison. The stadium is huge and the atmosphere is one I'll never forget," senior Maggie Feehan said.

Due to the weather, the girls' team had seven games cancelled. Since so many games had been cancelled, it was difficult to get in the groove of the new formation they had just learned.
"[Having seven games cancelled] was very disappointing, and I know if we would have had those games we would have had a more successful season," junior Courtney Kosch said.

Since the team had so many games cancelled, they decided to scrimmage the boys team during one of their practices. Both teams wore their uniforms and made jokes about how it was the girls' first game in a month.
"[Playing the boys] was fun, but we should have won," freshman Kamryn Chohon said.

At state, the girls' team lost 0-1 to Elkhorn. Elkhorn would go on to win the state title the following Monday. This was the end for the four seniors on the team, but Maggie Feehan and Kendra Wiese will go on to play college soccer.
"Scotus soccer will always have a special place in my heart. The girls have strong leaders coming back, and I'm confident they will make it back to state next year," Wiese said.

New beginnings

Change can be a hard obstacle to face sometimes, but for the boys' soccer team this year, transitioning to a new coach didn't affect them too much.
"We had Coach PJ as an assistant coach when Jon Brezenski was head coach. It's not too different because we have known him for a while," junior midfielder Inri Dimas said.

Sometimes new ideas and drills come along with having a new coach. Junior defender Carter Thorson commented on one particular addition to practice.
"We had to condition this year unlike past years," Thorson said.

The boys this year defeated crosstown rivals Lakeview as well as Grand Island Northwest, Grand Island Central Catholic, Concordia, and Jefferson. Their season ended when they lost to Norfolk Catholic in the sub district game. This was the second time this season they played Norfolk Catholic.
"We played our hearts out, but we unfortunately fell short both times," junior forward Braden Labenz said.

Since ending their season in a heartbreaker, junior midfielder Zack Beiermann and the rest of the returners look forward to getting better in the off-season.
"One big thing I took from this season to prepare for next season was never giving up on a player or the team. We always have to believe in each other," Beiermann concluded.

The boys' final record was 5-12.

The running 'ROCKS

After the long winter, the team, as well as head coach Janet Tooley, was thrilled for the start of the season.
"I was excited because I felt that we had some real quality on the team. I wasn't sure where our team scores would be due to the lack of depth, but overall the girls did even better than I anticipated, and we also got a great group down to Burke. We had a super season," Tooley said.

The girls ended up winning the Wayne Outdoor Meet and placing runner up at the Knights of Columbus Meet, the Lakeview Invitational, districts, and the conference meet.
"[The meet that was most exciting to win as a team] was the conference track meet because there was such competition, and we pulled together as a team to get runner up against some of the best competitors," senior thrower Alyssa Morton said.

The Shamrocks hauled thirteen team members to Burke, seven of them being from the girls' team. Freshman Anna Ehlers qualified in the high jump.
"It was fun watching all the different people race and get their personal bests. I also loved bonding with all the girls that went down. It was great. I would love to go again," Ehlers said.

Senior thrower Marika Spencer won the disc at state and placed second in shot put.

"I'll miss throwing, then going out on the football field and watching my teammates run," Spencer said.

Junior hurdler Bailey
Lehr was the second girl to place at state. Lehr placed seventh in the 300 m hurdles.

Striding for success

Running for fun isn't everyone's idea on how to end their day, but if it involves a medal of some kind at the end, the idea isn't so bad. The Scotus track team doesn't just compete as a team, many of the runners use their own strategies. Junior Elliott Thomazin is a distance runner for the Scotus team. He was also one of the six boys on the track team who qualified for state.
"Track is more personalized than other sports. It's all about individual competition. My favorite part of track is always the people," Thomazin said.

Junior Abram Perault throws disc and shot put for the boys track team.
"It's not a sport about getting first place. It's all about beating your best and improving times and distances," Perault said.

Track is a team sport though, too. The $4 \times 800$ is one of the many relay events in the sport that calls for a group to compete. Freshman Michael Gasper is one of the four who ran this event.
"My favorite event was the $4 \times 800$ because it was one I got to compete with a team instead of individually," Gasper said.

Many records were broken throughout the track season including school records. Senior Chase Andresen competed in pole vault, long jump, and the men's high hurdles. Andresen holds the school record for Scotus at 15 feet 4 inches in pole vault, and he also qualified for state.

The boys track season ended with six of the varsity boys qualifying for state, and Andresen, placing seventh, was the only one who placed. Senior Matthew Strecker qualified for state in the $4 \times 100$ relay.
"I was frustrated due to not qualifying for state junior year after going freshman and sophomore year, so I was determined to get there this year. We battled through pouring rain and freezing weather for a majority of the season, but we finally made it. It felt great to end my season and career at Burke," Strecker said.

LEARNING TO ENDURE Spring 2018 sure made it hard on athletes as they pushed through the dynamic weather patterns to do what they love. Thanks to the horrendous weather, 5 baseball games and 1 tennis meet had to be canceled. Scorching heat, cloudy skies, rain and lots of wind; Mother Nature couldn't set her plans straight.Sophomore Emily Miksch ended the season playing the varsity's number four doubles.

"The Fremont tournament was the worst of all. 21 mph winds with a downpour session and the meet was delayed plus a sunburn on top of it. Nebraska weather, what can you do?" Miksch said.

Senior Natalie Brutty ended the season playing the varsity's number two singles and number three doubles.
"The Lincoln East tennis tournament by far was the worst because there was a wind advisory and it was raining," Brutty said.

Throughout the season, the team had several victories over Hastings, Lincoln Northeast, and Norfolk as well as winning their home invite. The entire tennis varsity team competed at the state tournament in Lincoln, but no individuals placed.

Alongside tennis, the baseball team had just as many problems with the weather. Not only were the conditions uncomfortable, they were unpredictable!

 Scotus to play varsity this season.
"The first game of the year I thought it was going to be nice, so I didn't wear sleeves. Turns out it was 40 degrees and windy that night, and center field was the equivalence to Alaska to me," Palmer said.

The team lost to Bellevue East at districts, ending the season with a record of 10-11. However, this was an exceptional improvement from last year's record of 5-19.

Senior Trevor Kaslon finished out his high school career by playing first base, third base, and pitcher.
"Overall, I think we have helped change the culture of CHS Baseball. I don't think that we are exactly where we want to be, but it has been better than previous years," Kaslon said.

Exceeding expectations

Golf can be seen as an individualized sport to those who are looking in from the outside in. This may be due to the fact that most of the game is played inside the player's head as they count their individual score. After immersing oneself into this world, they are opened to the importance of teamwork.
"My favorite part is probably just being able to be with my friends and hang out," sophomore Jared Beaver said.

While golf is sometimes seen as more of an individualized sport, it also requires an effort from each member to work together as a team. They push one another as they strive towards a specific goal. The boys' golf team was determined to get to state.
"The team worked together to help each other improve so we could reach state. We challenged each other and helped each other out," junior Sam Blaser said.

Many of the golfers had set personal goals to reach by the end of the year.
"My goal was to not embarrass myself, and I failed that on the first 18 holes of the year," sophomore Evan Hand said.

Junior Bryce VunCannon went into the season with a goal of placing at every meet as well as the state tournament and met this goal after working for it all year.
"I was disappointed with the second day because I felt like I hadn't played very well, but overall I was happy that God gave me the opportunity to play at state and place fifth," VunCannon said.
Vuncannon placed fifth at the two-day state tournament that took place at Quail Run with a 76 the first day and a 78 the second day.

Fragments of famitu

Family. Noun. A basic social unit consisting of parents and their children, considered as a group, whether dwelling together or not.

Another way family is defined is as a group of people who are generally not blood relations but who share common attitudes, interests, or goals and, frequently, live together.

Scotus is not a boarding school, but the students and faculty do indeed live together. They encounter new experiences together and help each other to grow. Class discussions, pep rallies, state tournaments, and public performances are just a few of the places that the faculty and students express their Scotus love and pride.

At Scotus students thrive because they receive the guidance to work toward their goals and follow through. One does not come to Scotus to get an average education. When joining the Scotus family, each individual is set up for the chance to flourish and excel.

Through all the extracurricular activities offered at Scotus, students get the chance to bond together throughout the group's different events. Not just that, but each member of the team, club, or organization play a big role in the Scotus family.

"Playing the violin can fix any problem."

-Josh Styskal, 9
Freshman Josh Styskal picked up playing the violin as a hobby about two years ago.
"I just love playing and feeling the music. I find it really fun and amazing how I use my fingers, hand, wrist, mind, and soul to play the violin," Styskal said.

Though Styskal did not begin to play until he was thirteen, he has always had an interest in it.
"We couldn't find a teacher in Columbus until May of 2016, and she is now my biggest influence," Styskal said.

Freshman Ben Merrill has been dancing since he was three, and it has always been a passion of his.
"I started dancing because my sister danced, and when my mom and I would wait for her to get out of class, I would always be dancing to the music," Merrill said.

Though Merrill started dancing because of his sister, she is not the only infleunce in his love for dance.
"My biggest influence would have to be my dance teacher, Desiree Johnson, because she is so inspiring, and she makes me accomplish my goals," Merrill said.
"I love to dance because throughout the years, I have made many new friends that have stayed true to me." Merrill said.

TEACHERS SHARE SIMILAR PASTS

The faculty teaches the students, but at some point the teachers were students themselves. The Scotus teachers graduated from colleges spread across Nebraska including Midland Lutheran, Concordia, Hastings, UNK, CCC, UNL, Wayne State, and as far as Benedictine College in Kansas.

Theology teacher Kelly Koranda commented, "I went to Benedictine College in Atchison, KS because they had a strong theology program, and I felt very welcomed and at home when I visited there."

Unlike Koranda, many teachers did not cross state lines to attend college. A handful of Scotus teachers stayed close to home and attended the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.
"The teaching program consisted of a very small group of future teachers, so it didn't seem 'too big.' Being in Lincoln also offered a lot of opportunities to do my practicums in different types of schools," English teacher Deb Ohnoutka said.

Although Lincoln is an overall bigger school, more teachers found their home at Wayne State College in the small town of Wayne, Nebraska. Ten Scotus staff members attended Wayne State.
"I liked the size of the college - not so huge so that I would be a number, but big enough with activities to participate in," media center specialist Cathy Podliska said.

Development director John Schueth added one final comment, "WSC is noted for a strong teacher education program. In fact, it was named Nebraska State Teachers College at Wayne from 1949 to 1963."

LOCKING IT IN BEFORE BREAK

Each year a junior high lock-in is hosted on the Wednesday of Easter break by junior high student council sponsor Julie Blaser. High school students and parents of junior high students are encouraged to help out whenever possible as this lock-in takes place from 7 P.M. Wednesday night until 7 A.M. Thursday morning.

Seventh grader Isaac Dreher attended the lock-in for the first time this year.
"To stay awake, I pinched myself while I was sitting in the gym," Dreher said.

Also attending the lock-in for her first time was seventh grader Samantha Johnston.
"I still haven't recovered from the all-nighter,"

Johnston said.

The lock-in consists of many activities including volleyball tournaments, basketball tournaments, dancing, and a dodgeball tournament. To keep things moving, high school students helped with reffereeing games and being the DJ for the dance in the cafeteria.

Seventh grader Brianna Belzer spent most of her time at the lock-in on the dance floor.
"The best high school helper was Brandon Huynh because he was an awesome DJ," Belzer said.

The lock-in concluded in the morning with many junior high students half-asleep in the bleachers as they awaited the arrival of their rides to take them home.

What was the best part of the lock-in?

SEVENTH GRADERS SUPPORTED BY SIBLINGS

New school, new teachers, and new people all add up to panic for most seventh graders. However, many of the kids in this year's group of seventh graders didn't have quite as much to panic about. About one fifth of the kids in seventh grade this year were the youngest child in their family to attend Scotus.

Lindsay Ohnoutka, youngest of five kids in her family, got advice from her siblings before starting at Scotus.
"They told me that everything may seem hard on the first day, but it becomes easy and you'll get used to it," Ohnoutka said.

Other students found little help from their siblings before attending Scotus.
"My brother didn't give me hardly any advice before I came here," Gabbi Young said.

For some kids it was also helpful to already have social connections in the school. Alyssa Hiemer, youngest of three kids in her family, already knew several upperclassmen because they had gone to school with her two older brothers.
"My benefit [of having older siblings attend Scotus] is that older students know who I am already because of my brothers," Hiemer said.

Some students, like Samantha Johnston, got details about what to expect from new teachers and classes before she arrived at Scotus.
"[They told me] what teachers are more strict about what you say or do. They also told me which classes are easier than others," Johnston said.

For the most part, that one fifth of the seventh graders were pleased to have their siblings in school with them or to get their advice.
"She is a huge help, and I like having my sis around," Alex Ferguson concluded.

(middle) 7th grader Isaac Carstens poses for a picture during the book tasting picnic that took place during his literature class. (far left) Ted Fehringer gets ready to throw a ball at his opponents during the dodgeball tournament. The dodgeball tournament took place in Memorial Hall and 14 teams participated.

If you could pick one person to be your twin, who would you chose?

Eighth graders Ethan Wulf ffar top left), Sydney Quinn, and Jack Ryan (far bottom left) watch the solar eclipse that occurred on August 21st. The whole school went to Seward to witness the continental eclipse. (left) Abee Hutchinson, Garrett Oakley, and Avery Dierman do a science experiment in Mrs. McPhillips' Earth Science class. (bottom) Another group of students including Grace Mustard, Regan Sucha, Peter Woodhams, and Sophie Palmer complete the same experiment.
Waiting for their fellow classmates to complete their experiments are Allie Baumert, Camille Cox, Callie Backman, and Audrey Sprunk.

Dxnamic duos

Almost every grade at Scotus has a set of twins, but some don't have any at all. For the eighth grade class, however, there are two sets of twins along with one set of triplets.

There are benefits and drawbacks that come along with having a brother or sister in the same class.
"Some of the benefits are being able to do homework together and study for tests, but the best thing is coming home and telling each other funny stories that happened in school that day," commented Alaina Dierman, whose twin sister is Avery Dierman.

Another set of twins in their class is Lyndon and Calder Obal.
"One of the drawbacks is always getting compared to him when it comes to school and sports," Calder Obal said.

Since the Quinn triplets are at school and go home with each other, both Sydney Quinn and

Adam
Quinn agree that the relationship is different at school than it is at home.
"At home they don't talk to me as much," Adam said. Along with her brother, Adam, Sydney commented, "They lock themselves in their rooms and avoid me."

Sierra, on the other hand, disagreed because of the time they spend together.
"The relationship is relatively the same. I see them a lot at home since we live together, and I see them a lot at school because we have about every class together," Sierra said.

NAMES DEEINE STUDENTS, CONFUSE TEACHERS

Out of 364 students at Scotus, a few have the same name or unique ways of spelling their names. The freshmen class has nineteen students who either have the same name or names closely related. They also have a few people who have unique ways of spelling their names.

With there being three Ben's in one class, it can become confusing. One Ben is freshman Ben Merrill.
"It is very confusing [having two other Ben's in my class] because if two of us are in one class, the teacher will always say 'Ben', and we will always say 'Which one?' In religion, all three Ben's sit in one row," Merrill said.

Freshmen Kaira Dallman and Keira Feehan have closely related names. The only difference being an 'a' and an 'e' causing confusion for teachers.
"[Teachers have messed up our names] many times, and they mainly call me Keira," Dallman said.

Feehan has a unique name full of meaning.
"My name Keira means 'Black' and Feehan means 'Little Raven' so together they mean 'Little Black Raven', which I think is pretty cool," Feehan said.

Freshman Abaigeal Aydt may have one of the most distinctive ways of spelling her name, but she loves it because it makes her unique.
"[I like the way my name is spelled] because it is very fun to try and tell someone how to spell it. It also is different, and I like different. I would definitely keep it the same. Also, Abaigeal is the Irish way of spelling my name," Aydt concluded.

SOPHOMORES

Emily Miksch competes in the butterfly on the Columbus High swim team. Evan Hand scrambles io get around his opponent from Aquinas in wrestling. Mackenzie Brandenburg dribbles down the field to find an open teammate against Lakeview High School. Samantha Tonniges runs at State Cross Country. The girls team finished 4th at the state competition.

Tyler Vaught looks to dribble the ball up the field during the $3-2$ win against Lakeview.
Amber Buhman jumps up to block a hit against Kearney Catholic.
Katie Stachura pitches the ball to strike out a Lincoln Northeast's batter. Tyler Palmer runs the ball through the defender for a touchdown against GICC.

Kate Smith catches a strike against Lincoln Northeast.
Nick Taylor raises his arm after defeating his competitor, Dalton Borchers prepares for the next passing play against David City Aquinas. Brea Lassak comes around the corner at the State Cross Country meet.

Eric Mustard goes up for a layup against Omaha Concordia. The boys lost 57-48. Adam Kamrath approaches the ball to score on his opponent.
Liza Zaruba runs toward the finish line at the home course, the Lutjelusche course. Allie Mielak rolls the ball out to a teammate during the Council Bluffs tournament.

Striving as a sophomore

Excelling in many areas, the sophomore class has had an important role in varsity sports all year long. These students have been dreaming of showing their skills, strength, and determination through sports since they were young.

Allie Mielak is the starting goalie for the girls' soccer team.
"I have been playing soccer since I was about 5 years old. I started playing the goalie position around 9 years old," Mielak said.

Sophomore Tyler Palmer has been starting for the football team for two years. Palmer also contributes to the varsity basketball and baseball teams.
"My dad taught me to play sports; I have been playing since I was young, and he has been encouraging me ever since I was little," Palmer said.

Returning swimmer Emily Miksch competed on varsity as a freshman and was a state qualifier.
"It's challenging but relaxing because it's okay to have a bad day as an underclassman. When you're older I think that coaches expect you to be perfect, but as a sophomore it seems more acceptable," Miksch said.

Although contributing to win on a varsity team is what the team strives for, the relationships and memories are what the sophomore class will remember forever.
"You really become closer with the upperclassmen and make friendships and bonds with your teammates," Dalton Borchers said.

JUNIORS

What school event or activity do you enjoy the most?

"I enjoy all the activities! ! enjoy all of them because we act as a family in every activity. We all care and push one another to be the best."

Mira
Liebig, 11

" liked the dodgeball tournament. My team wasn't very good because we lost to the eighth graders, but the atmosphere was fun and enjoyable."

Braden Labenz, 11

"I enjoy being in FBLA the most because we do a lot of activities that help support our school and community while having fun at the same time!"

Hallie
Parker, 11

"Soccer because I love the people and the sport so much. It is a great environment."

Emily Stutzman, 11

LEAVING THELR MARK AND IMPACTING, OTHERS

The junior class is not only found on the court, a field, or in a gym, but they are also involved in school and community projects.

Elliott Thomazin is involved in campus ministry and is the Vice-President of NHS. He has also attended the March for Life, Steubenville, JC Camp as a counselor, and Quest for two years, yet he still finds time to do magic.
"All of these activities bring a lot of joy to my life. Knowing that I helped someone along their faith journey while working a retreat is a beautiful reward. Impacting the lives of the student body in a positive way is another awesome reason," Thomazin said.

Emma Brandt is involved in NHS, Revolution, mock trial, and has attended the March for Life and Steubenville. She recently went to St. Louis for a mission trip.
"I helped kids in St. Louis who did not have much. They were still very happy and made you realize things don't make you happy like other people think. I also helped restore a cemetery that was covered with weeds and tall grass. When people came to see that their loved one's grave had been uncovered, it brought them such joy," Brandt said.

All the different activities define the junior class. Julia Pichler is involved in campus ministry, student council, FBLA, one act, and the musical. She also attended the March for Life and Steubenville.
"These activities really show what the junior class is capable of and how dedicated we are to helping others," Pichler said.

Hannah Allen is involved in flag corps, NHS, the Youth Leadership Program in Columbus, and has attended the March for life, Steubenville, and JC Camp.

Allen concluded, "I think it shows that we are a really well rounded class that is very involved in not just sports, but the arts and our faith."

Seeking success

After six years of roaming the halls of Scotus Central Catholic, the class of 2018 closed the high school chapter of their lives.
These students have achieved many things in their high school careers. The seniors have won two state championships in both girls' basketball and journalism, and two state runners-up in mock trial and cheerleading plus many achievements in academic and fine arts.

Senior Jenna Salerno, who was elected class president by the senior class, gave the welcome at the graduation ceremony.
"Our class also has excelled in our academics, with many on the honor roll every quarter and involved in academic activities such as NHS and Student Council," Salerno said.

Although they had to overcome many obstacles, the seniors found a way to stick together as one. The class moto, "fight through adversity" allowed the class to tackle all situations and maintain an open mind.
"We all know that no matter what the situation is, we can always lean on someone around us, even if we don't know them as well as our best friends," Salerno said.

The class of 2018 created a bond with one another that is irreplaceable. They rely on one another to hold each other accountable to do the right thing and achieve greatness.

Salerno concluded, "Working with heart toward excellence and perfection at Scotus has instilled a drive in all of us to give nothing but our best, a drive that will be searched for in future careers and treasured in both our work and family lives."

Marika,

You have brought so much joy to us throughout the years. We have watched you grow into a beautiful, strong woman and couldn't be more proud of you! We love your desire to reach for your goals and can't wait to see what the future holds for you! Always keep God first in your life and ALWAYS stay humble and kind!

We love you!
Dad, Mom, and Zach

Alex,
We are so proud of the hardworking and kind person you have become. Good luck in college, and we can't wait to see you accomplish your goals in the future.
Love always,
Mom and Dad

Proud...understatement. We could not be more proud of you. We can't wait to see where this life takes you, but know it's going to be an awesome ride. Never stop believing, always pray for those less fortunate, be thankful and never, never, stop loving those puppies out there!

All Our Love Always,

Mom, Dad, Julia, Loki and Murphy

Landon,

We are so proud of you and all that you have accomplished so far in life. Remember to dream big because God has amazing plans for you! Trust Him. We know that you will do great things, and we will be here to support you every step of the way. We are so excited for you on this new journey.

God bless you!
Lots of love,
Mom, Dad, and Callie

Alaina,

We are so proud of the beautiful woman you have become. You are beautiful inside and out. As you begin this new journey, remember to keep God close. We know you will do great things. We love you.

Mom, Dad, Austin, and Alex

Logan,

Congratulations on your high school graduation! We are so proud of you and all your accomplishments. It has been a true blessing to watch you grow and mature in both school and sports. With your determination, hard work ethic, and outgoing personality, you will continue to be successful. We are so excited for you as you begin your new journey at Buena Vista University!

Love Always,
Mom, Dad, and Reeyce

Kelli,

We have been so blessed to have been able to watch you grow and mature into a beautiful young lady. We are so proud of you and who you have become. Best of luck to you in college and in your future.

Love,

Mom, Dad, and Jennifer

Winston,
Go confidently in the direction of your dreams and live the life you've imagined. Most of all, keep your faith in God and he will guide you.

With all of our love and support, Mom and Dad

We are grateful and honored to have been your parents the past 18 years, Kendra! You make us extremely proud of your accomplishments and we wish you the very best as you begin this exciting chapter in your life. Keep aiming high and always keep your Faith strong as He will see you through anything!

Love,
Mom, Dad, Kaleb, and Kade

Grace,

We are so proud of the strong young woman you have become. We are excited to see where your path will lead. Remember to keep your strong faith in God and trust He will guide you when your road is difficult. As you drive away, don't forget to look over your shoulder and remember where you came from. We love you more than you will ever know!! Now go make enough money to buy yourself the Jeep you always wanted! Haha

Love,
Mom, Dad, Anna, and Will

Wren,

We are so proud of what a fine young man you have become.
Always know how much you are loved!

Mom and Dad

Noah,

We are so proud of you and are truly blessed to have you as our son. We are so excited for you to pursue your dream! Life is a journey...enjoy the ride!!!

Love you so much!

Mom, Dad, and Cooper

Brock,

We are so proud of the young man you've become and are looking forward to this next chapter in your life-we know you will soar! Always follow your dreams, give it your all, and become what you want to be. We will always be here to support you. Remember to keep God in your life.
Love you forever and always,

Mom and Dad

Elley.
We have watched you become the strong, determined, and beautiful person you are today. You have always let God lead the way so continue to let him be by your side as you embark on the next chapter of your life. We are very proud of you and couldn't be more excited to watch you in the next journey of life.

We love you very much, Dad, Mom, and Jared

Shania,

We are so very proud of the beautiful person you are inside and out and all you have accomplished so far in your life. We wish you the best of luck in college and your future and look forward to watching you make your dreams come true. Always keep God in your life, work hard, do your best, make good choices, and have fun! Remember that we are always here for you! We love you very much!

Love,

Dad, Mom, Dalton, Devon, and Shayla
Ellie,
Congratulations on finishing this chapter of your life! You are a bright, compassionate young lady, and we have no doubt that you will accomplish great things. Stay true to yourself and remember we are always here for you.

We Love You,

Tessa,

We are so proud of the amazing young woman you have become. You have your whole life in front of you, remember to enjoy every moment. We know you are going to do great things and can't wait to see what your future holds! We love youl!

Love,

Mom, Dad, Shelby, Karsyn, and Cole

Alyssa,

We are so proud of you and all that you have accomplished. As you begin your new journey, trust in God's plan for you and you will be blessed. Always remember that we love you and will always be there for you.

Love,
Mom, Dad, and Tyler

Jake,

It has been fun watching you grow into the young man you are today. Your wit and sense of humor have kept us smiling. We are so proud of you and know you have the mindset and skills to make your dreams a reality. Your best years are yet to come. May God watch over you as you take this next step.

Love,
Mom, Dad, Sam, and Alex

Chase,

Your life will have some HURDLES along the way.
FLY over them and be FREE.
Always hold yourself to a STANDARD of grace, not perfection.
Just look at those PUNS
I used Chase!
We love you!!
Mom, Dad, and Kara

Trevor,

Your caring, fun-loving spirit has always served you well. Carry it forward as the next chapter of your life begins. We love you and are proud of you!

Dad, Mom, and Derek

Morgan,

We are very proud of the beautiful young woman you are today. You have danced your way through life up to this point and it does not stop here. Keep dancing as if no one is watching. As one chapter closes a new one begins. We know you will do great in whatever path you choose. We will always be here to help you along the way. Always keep God close as your decisions and choices will get harder as life goes on. Good Luck Missy!

We love you very much!
Dad, Mom, and Darin
